

The meeting

The meeting was interesting. Mr Wong invited me to The Italian Kitchen at The Quay. We ordered a drink and talked for a while before he wanted to start talking business. However, soon after we asked for the menu, he said he wished to get straight to the point and asked what I thought about the new factory project. I hinted that I thought it was located in the wrong place and asked him if he had considered moving it to Shanghai. He agreed that that would be a better idea.